Feb. 26.

For Mr. BAVIUS, Secretary of the Grub-ſtreet Society.

SIR,

THE cacoethes of ſcribbling (if I may ſo call it) is ſo epidemical, that every one almoſt that can write his name, will turn Author. Hence ariſe the WALSINGHAM's and HYP-DOCTOR's in Politicks, the B——NS's and K—B—R's in Dramaticks, and the innumerable fry of ſmart Writers in the daily and weekly Papers. ——— I can't but own I've found this malady growing on me ſometimes; but as I neither think myſelf dull enough for a Politician, nor pert enough for a Dramatick; the only way I can imagine to give me eaſe, is to endeavour, whenever the fit grows ſtrong, to carry it off by a letter to Mr. BAVIUS: nor can I doubt his admitting me a Correſpondent, which may put a ſtop to a diſeaſe that in time might prove incurable.

What at preſent has cauſed this itch of ſcribbling, is the obſervation I've made on a letter in your laſt Journal, Numb. 112, ſigned DRAMATICUS, and one in laſt ſaturday's Daily Courant, under the name of TAG-RHIME, that variouſly cenſure the Managers of either Theatre. DRAMATICUS, without any aſperſions on perſons, complains of the hardſhips an Author lies under, who even attempts to bring a Play on one ſtage: while Mr. TAG-RHIME very politely attacks the Manager of the other with all the rhetoric of Billingſgate. I have had an occaſion to obſerve what ſort of reception they both gave an Author; but beſides that, what I can infer from both letters is, that the Maſter of the New Houſe is moſt abuſed, but that the Managers of the Old deſerve it moſt. I have laid it down to myſelf for a general truth, That where there is moſt ſcurrility, there is the leaſt reaſon for it: this I take to be Mr. TAG-RHIME's caſe; who not knowing of what to accuſe the Maſter of the New Houſe in particular, retorts on him the accuſation of the Managers of the Old. But how ill it's ſuited to the Man, I ſhall make ſome obſervations from his own polite letter.

'About ſeven or eight years ago, he ſays, moſt 'of the dramatick Writers took it into their heads to 'be very angry with the Managers of the old Play-'houſe, whether with reaſons, or not, he can't ſay; but 'they accuſed them of avarice inſolence, and ſtupidity.' Tho' this Gentleman can't ſay, the dramatick Writers were uſed ill; yet he would inſinuate, they were not. If they were not, it is ſtrange Authors ſhould leave a ſett of Players, to whom themſelves and the Town had been ſo long bigotted, for a Company which then lay under not a little diſcouragement; nothing I think could induce them to this, but the ill treatment they met with from the Managers. But why ſhould I dwell on that of which every one knows the truth? Have not Plays, refuſed at the Old Houſe with contempt, and, I may venture to ſay, ill manners, been received at the New with that good nature, which gained the approbation of every one that made application to the Maſter? Should it be ſaid, that the Plays ſo rejected, were deſervedly rejected; I appeal only to the favourable reception they met with from the Town; which (with great deference to the judgment of the ingenious Mr. A—B—R, and the ceremonious Mr. W—KS) I think ought to be the beſt, and indeed the only judge, in all dramatick performances.

But he goes on, 'When the Maſter of the New Houſe 'by theſe arts [ſome of which, he ſays, were to ſooth 'and flatter dramatic Writers] and the concurrence of 'ſome accidents, thought he had fully gained his point, 'and eſtabliſhed himſelf upon the Town; (where by the way he owns, that affability to the Poets was not a 'little recommendation) how did he behave? he put on 'the pride of a Grand Vifier, with the breeding of a 'Bum Baily'. Falſe reflection! no one would have imagined the accuſation of pride ſhould ever have been charged on Mr. R——, which has been ſo juſtly attributed by all to C—B—R; and if he is leſs ceremonious than the well-bred Mr. W—KS, it is becauſe he has more good nature.

'Did the Poets reſent the alterations made in their 'works by one who had good pretenſions to wit and 'taſte? they muſt now ſubmit to ſee 'em mangled by a 'Tumbler that can't ſpell.' This Gentleman of wit and taſte is that judicious and harmonious ſing-ſong writer Mr. C---LL---Y C--B---R, whoſe Odes are a demonſtrative proof of his wit, as his reception and eſpouſing the Modiſh Couple will be of his taſte. And I can think it not the leaſt reflection on any man, that he has not ſuch wit, and ſuch a taſte. As to the mangling of dramatick pieces charged on Mr. R—, I believe it's the firſt time the world ever heard of this accuſation, tho' they have long ſince been made ſenſible that every dramatick piece that appears at the Old Houſe, muſt have firſt paſſed the ordeal trial of the Managers; and ſuch often bear ſo little reſemblance of the original off-ſpring of the Poet, that he miſtakes it for ſome baſtard foiſted on him by the Managers.

But Mr. TAG-RHIME ſums up all Mr. R——'s male qualifications. 'In ſhort, the vanity complained of in 'W—KS, the pertneſs charged upon C———R, &c. are 'united in one ſingle little fellow, without the leaſt mix-'ture of the good qualities which the others had to atone 'for them.' I own with Mr. TAG-RHIME, the Maſter of the New Houſe wants the good qualities: i. e. the ceremony, the wit and taſte of the Managers of the Old; but I affirm at the ſame time, he wants alſo the vanity of W——, and the pertneſs of a C---B---R.

This accuſation of the Maſter of the New Theatre, it ſeems, is ſo far from being ſecret hiſtory, 'that it is 'ſcarcely news; all the world knows it, the Poets have 'found their error, and repent it.' But if I'm not very much miſtaken, all Mr. TAG-RHIME's world is confin'd to Dr—y L—e Theatre, whoſe Managers would fain perſwade themſelves into the truth of every particular of Mr. R——: they are like a ſett of men, who tell things, not as the fact is, but as they would have it be.

That the Poets 'have met with ill uſage of various kinds 'at the New Houſe,' Mr. TAG RHIME has not made appear; tho' he ſays he could mention ſeveral inſtances. In his own caſe he does not ſay he was uſed ill; and if he was not uſed well, yet by his own confeſſion, he was not uſed better at the Old. I'm ſorry Mr. TAG-RHIME is ſo inconſiderate to mention again in this paragraph the altering and amending Plays, 'till they are completely ſpoil-ed at the New Houſe, when it has been ſo notoriouſly practiſed by that profound judge of wit and taſte, the refined Mr. Co--L---Y C---BB---R.

Was it not improper in this place, and would take up too much of your Paper, I believe I could let the Town into the knowledge, who Mr. TAG-RHIME is; and notwithſtanding his letter proceeds neither from ſpleen, nor friendſhip, I could ſhew he has too great an Intereſt at Drury-lane for the Town to believe him.

I have took no notice of a third Manager at the Old Houſe, as I thought it would be ungenerous to attack a Gentleman under his misfortune; and who for a long time has been excluded from the management, and been even uſed ill both by his well bred, and his ingenious brother-partners.

If I've aſſerted any falſity, I don't doubt, Sir, but you'll give Mr. TAG RHIME an opportunity of juſtifying his letter, and be equally impartial to him, and

Mar. 1, 1731. Your humble ſervant,

PROSAICUS.

We are deſired to publiſh the following Epiſtle to DRAMATICUS, in order to clear up his Doubts about the true meaning of the word Theatrical, &c. and put him out of his pain.

To DRAMATICUS.

SIR,

I Conceive that the Epithet Theatrical apply'd to Plays, in itſelf, means nothing. But Mr. W. applies that word to the Pieces of thoſe Authors, who have the knack of wriggling themſelves into his good graces; by what means I will readily communicate to you, or any other Brother of the Bathos in private, provided he will let me go ſnacks with him in the profits of his third night. Having written at leaſt twenty theatrical Pieces (tho' neither ſenſible nor pretty) which have ſucceeded by this very rule, and no other, I think, without the imputation of arrogance or vanity, I may ſafely pronounce it infallible.

C—— J——n.

Mr. DACTYL upon the reading of this letter obſerved, that tho' this might be the real meaning of the word Theatrical at the bottom, yet there was another, which to him ſeemed probable at leaſt. He imagined, that a Play might be ſaid to be Theatrical, when the characters in it were adapted to thoſe Parts in which the Actors might ſhine moſt. For inſtance, thoſe of a Beau, a Coxcomb, a Cuckold, or a Villain; of a Coquet, a Jilt, a Whore, or an Adultereſs. Beſides, as Actors are ſometimes Dramatic Authors themſelves, a Writer ſhould obſerve in what manner they deliver their own Comic jokes, or Tragic fuſtian; and endeavour to ſuit the different ſneers, grimaces, rants, and poſtures, which he has obſerved to be moſt ſucceſsful. This, with the two former, he thought, took in Theatricality in its utmoſt extent.

Having given in our 109th Journal only the initial letters of the names of the Witneſſes againſt King CHARLES I, as they are modeſtly recorded in Ruſhworth, we ſhall now give them at full length, from the additional 7th Vol. to LORD CLARENDON's Hiſtory; that theſe worthy perſons, as good Gentlemen as many of the King's Judges, may not loſe any part of the glory due to them, for having joined with thoſe noble Patriots in the accompliſhment of ſo unparallelled an Action.

Mr. BAVIUS,

AS I was going up Chancery-lane t'other day, I ſaw at a diſtance before me, a coal cart unloading at one of the new houſes. The Carman had ſo placed his cart againſt the poſts, and ſome of his ſacks upon the pavement, that there was no paſſing without going beyond the middle of the ſtreet, and over the channel. Juſt as I came up, a very little Gentleman (who, I am ſure, is the ſame you mention in your Journal of the 24th of Feb. Numb. 112. on occaſion of his throwing for Oranges at a wheelbarrow, in his hand and bar Gown) had finiſh'd his diſpute with the obſtinate Carman, who refuſed to make him way; whereby he was forc'd to go croſs the channel, and back through the dirt to come again upon the pavement. The little Gentleman's anger encreaſed, and ſeeing me juſt by him, deſired to borrow my cane; which I innocently, and little dreaming of the ill conſequence, immediately lent him. He received it very graciouſly, acknowledging my extreme kindneſs as a ſtranger; and, to my very great ſurprize, inſtantly ſet about belabouring the poor Carman, and gave him ſeveral ſmart blows. The Carman, tho' a very ſtout, ſturdy fellow, received the blows mildly, calmly, and gravely; and without any emotion of paſſion at all, not giving ſo much as an angry word or look, ſeized the little Gentleman by the collar with one hand, and held him ſo faſt againſt the rails, that he could not ſtir one jot; and having him fixed there with one hand, he with the other unbuttoned his breeches, pulled out his urine pipe, and piſſed in the little Gentleman's face, and all over his cloaths, turning the ſtream of his water as it paſt through his hand engine, firſt to one part, then to another, and ſo on, 'till he had thrown it all over the little Gentleman's face, hat, wig, collar, boſom, cloaths and ſtockings, and into his ſhoes: in ſhort, the Carman happened to be ſo very piſs-proud, that he made the poor little Gentleman in as bad a condition, as if he had drawn him through a pond; and when he had quite done piſſing on him, very quietly buttoned up his breeches, and diſmiſſed him with a contemptuous ſmile.

The little Gentleman went away ſeemingly ſorrowful, and whether the tears or urine were trickling down his face, I could not diſtinguiſh; but he angrily [illegible] own my cane in the dirt, which the honeſt Carman ſnatched up and wiped, and returned me with a great deal of civility.

The little Gentleman went into a Coffee-houſe, I did not care then to follow him in; but the next day I went in there to enquire the news of the houſe, and was told, that he there met one or two of his moſt intimate acquaintance, who enquiring of him the occaſion of his being in that ſad condition, he very pleaſantly told 'em, he had been held under an attachment of contempt, from which he was juſt then diſcharged. I am yours, &c.

It has been related to the Society as a certain truth, that Mr. SAMUEL SHARP, late Apprentice to the famous Mr. CHESELDEN, and now a Surgeon in Fenchurch-ſtreet, was choſen one day laſt week Lecturer of Anatomy to S. Thomas's Hoſpital; where he read a very learned Lecture to a numerous Audience, which was much admired and applauded by all, particularly by thoſe Surgeons of our Society who were preſent.

It has always been an allowed privilege belonging to the Weekly Writers of our Society, to inſert in their Papers commendations of them dated from what places they pleaſe, even the remoteſt in the Kingdom Our Brother HENRY STONECASTLE, Eſq; therefore acts very prudently in inſerting every now and then a panegyric of this kind, and particularly one from Wales in Numb. 177. written by TAFFIT MOARGAN AP SHENKIN, who by the elegancy of his verſes evidently ſhews how good a judge he is of theſe weekly performances. The two following lines contain a fine complement.

In you another ADDISON we ſee,

And the two laſt give extraordinary good advice:

Go on and proſper in thy juſt deſign,
And foremoſt of the WEEKLY WRITERS thine.

In order to which, it is the opinion of our Society, that the next time he inſerts any verſes from his Correſpondent at Briſtol, he ſhould get them new-tagg'd: for thoſe in the laſt Univerſal Spectator, Numb. 179, are neither rhime, nor blank verſe; Sir and far, ſcarce and commerce, abroad and Lord, being no better rhimes, than ſuppreſs and breaſt, taſte and aſs, in another Weekly Paper of the ſame day.

The admirable defence of Punning in Numb. 178, received the approbation of the whole Society; and our Brother FOG is adviſed not to ſpeak ſo diſreſpectfully for the future of that ingenious art, as he did in his Journal of laſt ſaturday.

The Letter in anſwer to the notes upon the letter of HORATIANUS, printed in our 110th Journal was received: but it was not thought that the Publick was intereſted enough in the diſpute to be entertained with it. Mr. BAVIUS intending to be a Moderator between PHILARCHÆUS and HORATIANUS, and not to ingage as an Antagoniſt againſt either of them; will leave his notes to the judgment of the Reader.

We informed the Public by three advertiſements in the Daily Papers laſt week, that there was actually in the preſs a beautiful and correct edition of Select Memoirs of the Society of GRUB-SRTEET, containing all the moſt curious Letters, Eſſays, Poems, and Remarks, printed in our Journals, with many alterations, additions, and explanatory notes upon the whole; adorned with Hogarthian Frontiſpieces, repreſenting to the life the Authors, Printers, Publiſhers, and Bookſellers of Grub-ſtreet. To make this edition as perfect and compleat as poſſible, all Gentlemen, who have favoured us with their correſpondence, are deſired to ſend us ſuch emendations of their particular Pieces, as they ſhall think proper; and directions by what capital letters they would have them diſtinguiſhed. — — The Pyratical Publiſhers of Grubiana have again advertiſed it, as beautifully and correctly printed, tho' they have not been able to contradict one ſyllable advanced in our laſt concerning the multitude of blunders in it. In this advertiſement, they call the Contents, A compleat Index to the whole, which is only an Index, tho' not a compleat one, of their ignorance and impudence.

An Epigram occaſioned by a profane, lewd, and ſtupid Copy of verſes about a Horſe and an Aſs, printed laſt week in an obſcure Weekly Journal, and beginning,

Charm'd with an Angel offer'd to his view;
The ſtory's ſtrange, but we muſt ſwear 'tis true.

Epigram.

Why ſhould we wonder, that in old Records,
An Aſs is ſaid to've ſpoke in human words?
Since, in theſe modern, learn'd, inlighten'd times,
Brutes ſpeak not only proſe, but oft in rhimes.
Such verſe ſome neighing Brute muſt ſure indite,
Or elſe ſome braying, duller Beaſt muſt write.
—— But hold, perhaps I'm wrong: this will not paſs:
'A heavy Mule is neither Horſe, nor Aſs.'

This day was held a general Court at the South-ſea houſe, where nothing material was done: only a great many Speeches were made on both ſides; and among the reſt, the famous Mr. C—y C—r, whoſe ſtock is large, delivered one with his uſual eloquence: and the Court adjourned till friday ſe'nnight.

SIR,

SInce my retirement from publick affairs, your weekly performances have been my conſtant entertainment. I read them with pleaſure, and knowing you to be a lover of truth and liberty, recommend the following letter to a place in your next Paper, which will very much oblige,

Sir, your moſt humble ſervant and well-wiſher, &c.

BROTHER WOOLSTON,

Thou wilt, perhaps, think me a very buſy fellow to inſcribe this Letter to thee: but when thou art informed that I am one who delights much in ſpeculations on the conduct of extraordinary men, who daily furniſh the world with new and uncommon opinions, thou wilt undoubtedly receive my candid admoniſhments with calmneſs and good nature. In the firſt place I ſhall aſk thee, if thou haſt peruſed a certain Pamphlet juſt publiſhed, intitled a parallel between MUHAMED and SOSEM, by ZELIM, &c. and what is thy opinion of it? if not, I adviſe thee to read it over with deliberation; thou wilt find by the ſtrength of our Muſulman's arguments, that thou haſt been guilty of a *hugeous error, in thy late converſion from the Chriſtian belief to that of the Jews; for hadſt thou luckily made choice of the Mahometan religion, thou mightſt have eſtabliſhed thy opinion upon a more rational foundation, as thou wilt acknowledge, when thou haſt made an impartial enquiry into the different grounds of the one and the other. However, do not imagine that I have any farther intereſt in recommending that work to thee, than the pure love I bear unto one who has made ſo conſiderable a figure in the world by his writings, and whoſe merit has in ſome manner been depreciated by thy late miſtaken rabbinical notions. Take this my friendly advice in good part, and if thou doſt * rape any benefit by it, my ambition will be gratified thereby, and I ſhall hereafter hold thee in greater eſteem, as I profeſs myſelf thy Brother and Servant, ALY. —— Since the preceding two letters were compoſed, we have been informed, that the Pamphlet mentioned in the latter, is the work of one who ſeems to be neither J— C—n, nor Turk: and therefore, we apprehend, the Author may deſign, (according to his own words) a * hegeous rape upon the pockets of the Public.

Dublin, Mar. 4. We hear, that the perſon, who murdered the ſervant of Jam. Hamilton, Eſq; of Carlow, is taken and committed to the goal of Maryborough. C. P. Mar. 11. —— This night died Sir Chamberlen Walker, Knt. chief practiſer of Midwifery in this kingdom. D P. Mar. 11. — The Villain here ſaid to be taken, cut off the ſervant's noſe, and pull'd out his eyes.

Dublin, Mar. 7. We hear from Kilkenny, that a cruel robbery was lately committed within 2 or 3 miles of that place, by a gang of Villains, who broke into a houſe, and ſtript his family of all they had; they broke Mr. Smith's arm, cut his noſe off, ſtabbed him in ſeveral parts of his body, and almoſt broke his back. They almoſt hanged his mother, by tying her over the baniſter of the ſtairs: there is little hopes that either of them will recover. P. Mar. 14. —— I expect a remark from ſome Iriſh Gentleman upon theſe ſtrange robberies and murders committed by his Countrymen.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSDAY, March 9.

Yeſterday arrived the Mails from France and Holland.

Rome, Feb. 23. N. S. On the 15th, the Chevalier de S. George's eldeſt ſon had a private audience of the Pope, who preſented him with a bill of 3000 crowns, and told him it was a prize he had drawn in the lottery called the Play of Genoa. C. ——— D P. Mar. 10.

Venice, Feb. 23. It is written from Corfu, that they had had ſuch heavy rains for 3 days, that ſeveral villages were laid under water; that the rains were preceded by a violent ſhock of an earthquake; that a man of war in the harbour was 5 times thunder-ſtruck in one day; and that during the ſtorm, the air was filled with owls, bats, and other birds of the night, which perched upon the maſts and yards of the ſhip. P.

FRIDAY, March 10.

Medreyga in Hungary, Jan. 7, 1732. Upon a current report, that in the village of Medreyga certain dead bodies (called here Vampyres) had killed ſeveral perſons by ſucking out all their blood, the preſent enquiry was made by the Honourable Commander in Chief; and Capt. Gorſchutz of the Company of Stallater, the Hadnagi Bariacrar, and the Senior Heyduke of the village, were ſeverally examined: who unanimouſly declared, that about 5 years ago a certain Heyduke, named Arnold Paul, was killed by the overturning of a cart load of hay, who in his lifetime was often heard to ſay, that he had been tormented near Caſchaw, and upon the borders of Turkiſh Servia, by a Vampyre; and that to extricate himſelf, he had eaten ſome of the earth of the Vampyres graves, and rubbed himſelf with their blood. —— That 20 or 30 days after the deceaſe of the ſaid Arnold Paul, ſeveral perſons complained that they were tormented; and that, in ſhort, he had taken away the lives of four perſons. In order therefore to put a ſtop to ſuch a calamity, the inhabitants of the place, after having conſulted their Hadnagi, cauſed the body of the ſaid Arnold Paul to be taken up, 40 days after he had been dead, and found the ſame to be freſh, and free from all manner of corruption; that he bled at the noſe, mouth, and ears, as pure and florid blood as ever was ſeen; and that his ſhroud and winding ſheet were all over bloody; and laſtly, his finger and toe nails were fallen off, and new ones grown in their room ——— As they obſerved from all theſe circumſtances, that he was a Vampyre, they, according to cuſtom, drove a ſtake through his heart; at which he gave a horrid groan, and loſt a great deal of blood. Afterwards they burnt his body to aſhes the ſame day, and threw them into his grave. —— Theſe good men ſay farther, that all ſuch as have been tormented or killed by the Vampyres, become Vampyres when they are dead; and therefore they ſerved ſeveral other dead bodies as they had done Arnold Paul's, for tormenting the living.—Signed, Bartuer, firſt Lieutenant of the Regiment of Alexander. Flickbenger, Surgeon Major to the Regiment of Furſtemburch. — Three other Surgeons. Gurſchitz, Captain a Stallath.

SATURDAY, March 11.

Camentz in Upper Lauſnitz, Feb. 22. On tueſday laſt died here one John Hof, aged near 105 years, being born in 1628. He ſerved 82 years in the wars, and had made 36 campaigns: he had married 3 wives, the laſt of them when he was 100 years old. His conſtitution was ſo ſtrong and healthy, that 'till a few days before his death he was employed as a foot meſſenger, to carry letters ſeveral miles every day, and was ſick but 2 days. P.

Petersburgh, Feb. 19. The Princeſs of Mecklembourgh's marriage with the Prince Royal of Pruſſia, is publickly talked of; the Czarina has augmented her Court, and given her the title of Imperial Highneſs. D P.

MONDAY, March 13.

Late laſt night arrived the Mail from Holland.

Amſterdam, March 18. Letters from Berlin of the 11th adviſe, that on the 10th the Prince Royal of Pruſſia was contracted to the Princeſs of Beveren, in the preſence of their Majeſties, the Royal Family, the Duke and Dutcheſs of Beveren, the Duke of Lorrain, and other perſons of diſtinction, with great ſplendor and ceremony; upon which occaſion, his Royal Highneſs preſented the Princeſs with a ring valued at 24,000 crowns, who gave another in exchange valued at 10,000. D P. &c.

TUESDAY, March 14.

Yeſterday arrived the Mail from Holland.

Hague, Mar. 16. The States of Holland have publiſhed a Placaert, to ſuppreſs an impious and profane Book, entituled, The overthrow of the Worlds Idol, or the Faith of the Elect manifeſted in the Writings of Pontian de Hattem, &c. His impious and prophane ſentiments are of a piece with thoſe of Spinoſa: for example, That the tranſgreſſion of the commandments and law of God, or of the ſovereign, is no ſin at all; no cauſe of repentance or remorſe for a Chriſtian. C.

This Mail brings a vacancy in the ſacred College by the death of Cardinal Mareſcotti; and adviſes the arrival of the King of Poland at Warſaw. The Marquis de Caſtellar, Ambaſſador of Spain at Paris, is going to Italy in all haſte, which ſurprizes many Politicians. The French are fitting out 12 men of war at Breſt and Toulon. P.

The first Impression being near sold off, on Account of several agreeable Pieces both in Prose and Verse, sent by unknown Correspondents, particularly a Copy of the Will of Samuel Travers, Esq; which was inserted entire with the Letter prefixed. Another Correspondent was pleased to give the Author a seasonable Hint (which was observed) in the following exceeding Complaisant Epistle,

To Mr. Sylvanus Urban.

SIR,

THE Gentleman's Magazine is, perhaps, one of the most useful Things of the Kind that has been at any Time set on Foot; but this Usefulness must in Justice and Gratitude be attributed to your unbyass'd Impartiality and Industry: It serves me, and to my Knowledge several others, for what your Title truly expresses it, that is, a Magazine or Repository of every Thing worthy remarking, and for this Reason will be many Years hence, an Authentick Collection for Historians to refer to, when Disputes shall arise on the Manner and Spirit with which the present Controversies are carried on, the Force of their Arguments on both Sides being fully retain'd; besides many Historical Occurrences may be here found, which, tho' they escape the Notice of great and voluminous Historians, will serve to explain and clear up the Truth of several Facts which in Time may appear doubtful; and the Reasons and Origin of some Transactions will be here found, which might otherwise be sought after in vain.

When I have premised this, I can't help thinking but that you will excuse me for taking Notice of a Slip which you made in July last, in Respect to Gibraltar; and I am sure it was no other than Inadverteney and Slip, for your whole Design shows you mean no Wrong to any Party. The Piece I mean was published in one of the Daily Papers, and the Reason why, as I take it, you did not recite it was, that by Eleven a-Clock the Morning of Publication it was all sold off, and I gave myself a Shilling for one on Tuesday Morning following, however you may easily see it in some Coffee-houses, and when you have so done, I am very sure you will lay the Materials of it up in your Magazine; for it is not a Temporary Thing, and therefore not worn out by the Date, but will be as satisfactory now as on the Day of Publication. I conclude, Sir, with my harty Thanks to you for the Benefit and Pleasure I receive from your Studies, and am your Friend and Servant, tho' unknown, Octob. 14, 1731. L. J.

Printed at St. John's Gate, and sold by F. Jeffries in Ludgate-street; A. Dodd, near Temple-bar; E. Nutt, &c. at the Royal-Exchange; where may be had compleat Setts; also an exact LIST of Parliament.

WHEREAS other Coffee-Houses, and other Publick Houses, take of their Customers 8 s. for a Quart of Arrack, and 6 s. for a Quart of Rum or Brandy made into Punch, so that it is now become the settled Price throughout the Town, and seldom less than a Bowl of 1 s. 6 d. is to be had: Therefore, for the better accommodating all Gentlemen, that are Lovers of Punch,

This is to give Notice,

That I have opened on Ludgate-hill, the London-Coffee-House and Punch-House, (Two Punch-Bowls on Iron Pedestals before my Door,)

Where the finest and best old Batavia Arrack, Jamaica Rum, and French Brandy, are made into Punch, with the finest Ingredients, viz.

A Quart of Arrack made into Punch for 6 s. and so in Proportion to the smallest quantity, which is half a Quartern for four Pence Half-penny.

A Quart of Rum or Brandy made into Punch for 4 s. and so in Proportion to the smallest Quantity, which is half a Quartern for 3 d. And Gentlemen may have it as soon made, as a Gill of Wine can be drawn; with the best of Eating, Attendance, and Accommodation.

This Undertaking has occasion'd many, whose Interest it is to possess Gentlemen with such an Opinion, that the Liquors by me used are not good: The Publick is hereby assured, that I buy my Goods on the Keys, and at the best Hand, with Ready Money, and am at this Time provided with as well-chosen Brandies, Rum and Arrack, as any in Town, and will at all times procure the best that is imported: But what may convince Gentlemen of the Truth hereof, is, (not only by the Encouragement I meet with) that the Sherbet is always brought by itself, and the Brandy, Rum, or Arrack in the Measure, so there can be no Imposition, either in Quantity or Quality; for the Proof whereof I appeal to all Gentlemen who have done me the Honour to call at my House.

James Ashley.
